Melbourne, the second largest city in Australia by population, is also one of the fastest growing cities in the country. A number of Japanese businesses are already established in Melbourne and with the Japan-Australia Economic Partnership Agreement effective from January 2015, it is expected that ties between the two countries will become even stronger in the future. JAL will strengthen its network in the Oceania region with the launch of this new service, which is in addition to the airline’s current route to Sydney.

The new Melbourne service will depart from Narita in the morning and arrive into Melbourne at night, whilst the return flight will depart from Melbourne at night and arrive into Narita in the morning. By setting a different schedule from the current Sydney route (*2), customers will have more choices for their travel needs to and from the Oceania region.

(*2) Flight schedule of Sydney service: Departing from Narita at night and arriving in Sydney in the morning. Return flight departing from Sydney in the morning and arriving at Narita in the evening.
